JAM

The end of the state's most tumultuous public relief week found the situation in Columbus about as confused as usual, with the exception of the sitdowners in Gov. Davey's reception room.

The senate adjourned Friday for a long weekend. The house seems to be lost somewhere in the general confusion. The governor is sticking to his threat to send out army kitchens if the legislature doesn't provide funds for relief.

There's no shame any more in not understanding these things; they defy understanding. It's silly to blame anyone in particular; it's just as silly to blame everybody. Things are in a jam, and jams aren't straightened out by being angry with the unhappy devils who are in the middle of them. Traffic policemen never learned that, though, so Ohioans can't be blamed for wanting to swear at someone.

They are continuing to hope, nevertheless, that their state still has enough sense to get out of the relief mess without making a spectacle of itself. By the end of the week it will know whether it hoped too much or not.

SCOWLS FROM ALL SIDES

If George A. Ball has a sense of humor—and he looks like the kind of a man who'd have one—he's probably grinning over his sudden emergence as a target for scowlers.

Sen. Wheeler, chairman of the railway finance committee, is scowling at him from Washington. The interstate commerce commission is scowling at him. The looks cast at him by the bureau of internal revenue are sour and dark. Cleveland newspapers are wringing their foreheads editorially and worrying gravely about matters which probably haven't crossed Mr. Ball's mind yet.

All this is because he thought it was a good idea to transfer his holdings in Midamerica Corp. to a family charitable foundation, which in turn will sell the stock and take the profit. Thus, Mr. Ball, the philanthropist, would save the tax which the government would take from Mr. Ball, the financier, if he sold the stock in his own name. In this particular case, the tax would yield more than 50 percent of the profit which Mr. Ball has made on the stock—a tidy sum of $10,000,000 or more.

Even the way of the philanthropist is hard. The government makes taxes so high a man must give away his property to evade them, then tries to keep him from giving it away. A city which has been in the habit of apologizing for the kind of finance represented by Midamerica Corp. now finds itself anxious over the possibility the stock of this holding company might fall into hands unaccustomed to Cleveland's brotherly touch.

THE HERSHEY INCIDENT

One more sitdown strike, in the midst of so many, scarcely gets attention. The short-lived strike of Hershey workers in Hershey, Pa., attracted attention however, because it was different.

It was not the first time strikers have been in danger of physical opposition from an outside group, acting independently of civil authority. It did happen to be one of a few times that the danger materialized.

Mob violence always is a possibility. In the General Motors strike, there was acute danger that non-sympathizers would take things into their own hands and try to oust sitdown strikers. Gov. Murphy mobilized the national guard to forestall action against strikers who, themselves, were violating law.

The incident at Hershey, in which farmers dependent on the continuance of production for sale of their milk ousted sitdowners, will encourage other non-sympathizers to consider the possibilities of direct action. Fortunately, there are not many situations in which the opposition is so well organized or strongly motivated.

This is fortunate because in their present state of confusion it is doubtful if politicians would know how, or feel able, to maintain civil authority in the face of opposing mobs. It is just one more reason why government should arrive quickly at a labor policy consisting of something more than tacit consent to whatever the group which claims the greatest voting strength decides to do. That, itself, is dangerously close to mob rule. When one group claims the right to act outside the law, other groups cannot be blamed for adopting the same tactics.

THE STARS SAY:

For Tuesday, April 13

A day with excellent auguries for progress and prosperity is forecast from the ruling planetary configurations. It is an excellent period for forging ahead to high goals and ambitions. In addition to the friendly encouragement of those in place and power in a practical program, there also should accrue a stabilization of the fortunes and enhanced prestige and popularity. In this attainment, elders may play important parts.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are assured a happy, prosperous and progressive year, with steady progress toward high ambitions as well as to the place of cherished hopes and wishes in a purely personal or ambitious direction.

A child born on this day may be steady, capable, dependable, progressive and ambitious, and may win the support and friendship of important personages. It should have a happy and prosperous life.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, April 12—Diary: Up and hails by post from William Lyon Phelps, Carolyn Wells, Clare Boothe and Jerome Kern, which brightened the day. Also a note from John T. McCutcheon to visit him on his island in the Bahamas. So abroad for a cord to hang Percy Crosby's exquisite winter scene.

This day my wife came upon my gift to her on her 12th birthday, a game of tiddle de winks. And I told her how it cost a dime at the Bankrupt Store, but, ever the gay deceiver, I penciled 50 cents on the bottom of the box, and we looked, and it was there. So to the Frank Cases' party for Mary Boland.

Driving to Greenwich to dinner and back too late to drop in at Lee Olwell's to join him, Bill Corum and John McClain for a fourth at quattering and authors. So to bed reading Noel Coward's autobiography, "Present Indicative," and so absorbed I did not put it down until the cock's crow.

The Rialto hears its once daintiest queen of the high wire, Bird Millman, is coming back to the dazle. She was long a vaudeville and Folies' headliner. In 1923 while with a Folies show she married a handsome young Harvard man, went to live in Brookline, and was widowed by a tragic accident the same year. Grief stricken, she went to a lonely ranch in the Colorado high country. Several months ago the old urge returned. She erected a wire, got out her pale pink tights and began to recapture the grace once hers. She is reputed to be the same elfin 100 pounds of floating loveliness and will attempt to thrill an audience, which has never seen her.

Newspapermen, too, have heard of a pleasing comeback of one of their tribe in Florida. Spearman Lewis, well known in Chicago. Arriving in Miami three years ago flat broke, he and his wife occupied a shack and their total assets were a broken down Ford and $20. They lived in one room. One day, surfeited with ennui, Lewis took $10 of their hoard and went to the dog races. In a sudden seizure of gambling desperation, he played a hunch and won on a daily double, $2,240. He phoned his wife and that day they bought a plot of ground. A banker loaned him enough to build three villas, which are today worth $60,000. A community grew up around him, known as Surfside, and he is the Mayor. At odd times and for mere relaxation he now and then peeks out a short story. But the newspaper grind is far behind.

The Ella Boole influence: A regular old time saloon at 3d avenue and 51st street is called Jean Elizabeth's.

Two society girls, surfeited with what Cholly Knickerbocker calls "ennui of the elite," lickety-split into success with a flower shop recently. And all because they were first past the post with cellophane delivery boxes that revealed the flowers to passers-by as perky Parisian looking midnights delivered them. Cellophane millinery boxes, which I believe Peggy Hoyt introduced, have also caught the popular fancy. Ladies can look over their bonnets in their closets without taking them out of the boxes. And from a number I've seen around and about a quick glance is quite enough. I think the best of the millinery mots was by Bob Burns who, after looking them over, said he thought it was now Queen Mary's turn to laugh.

Thingumbobs: Joe Louis's extravagance after each fight is to buy a new tailor made suit. . . . Meredith Willson, the orchestra leader, was once a trumpeter with Souza's band, touring the globe. . . . Courtney Ryley Cooper has a Boston that will sneeze when he says "pepper." . . . Harlem now has a Bert Williams' Cafe. . . . The highest priced single dog act is Red Rust whose owner is paid $650 a week. . . . This is the dog that makes himself go limp enough for a chorus girl to use him as a lady's fur neckpiece.

HEALTH

MONOXIDE FUMES

Carbon monoxide is one of the most deadly of all the gases known to mankind. It is an ingredient of natural gas, coal gas and illuminating gas. It is abundant in the exhaust of automobiles. It is so poisonous that even the inhalation of a small amount of carbon monoxide may prove serious.

For many years carbon monoxide poisoning continued to take a high toll of lives. The seriousness of these tragic accidents was only realized within recent years. I am glad to say that as a result of the work of a special committee appointed to investigate this problem and to warn the public of its danger, many thousands of lives have been saved.

But in spite of the careful investigation of carbon monoxide poisoning on the part of health authorities, and the repeated warnings by public health officials, accidents continue to occur. In most instances, they can be traced to negligence and carelessness in the care of certain household appliances and automobiles.

Make Inspection

It is a good plan for all housewives to make a careful inspection at this time of the year of coal and gas stoves, gas jets, flues and gas tubing. If you find any defective parts or worn out appliances through which an escape of gas is possible, now is the time to correct the defect.

Bear in mind that many cases of carbon monoxide poisoning can be traced to the use of leaky coal stoves or gas jets. There is escape of gas from defective tubing, gas jets and flues. The liberation of carbon monoxide also occurs in improper banking of fires, defective chimney flues and boilers, as well as cracked fire pots in hot air furnaces.

But perhaps the greatest menace of carbon monoxide is found in the exhaust of automobiles. Of course, there is no danger from this source while the automobile is outdoors. But too often garage doors and windows are shut and the motor is allowed to run. This permits the escape of large quantities of gas into a confined space, and if it is inhaled, it may prove fatal.

Never allow a motor to run unless you are assured of adequate ventilation. Make sure there is a fresh circulation of air in the car as well as around the car.

CHAPTER XVII

Denise made a small sound like a man. But she said, "Felicia and Keith were only in an accident. You read something into the cable that Father didn't mean."

He shrugged his shoulders. "I'll make a bargain with you."

"What?" Her voice was dull now.

"Wait for the newspapers from America. If the accounts describe a large house-party and an accident on the way home from it, you can call tomorrow. If the accounts make it fairly clear that Felicia and Keith went on a trip together, you stay with me until your year's up."

"All right. But I'm so sure, Gilbert, that if I'm wrong, I'll give you an extra month. We were married November twenty-second. I'll stay until December twenty-second this year, if I'm wrong."

A faint color had come into her cheeks. He thought: "It's dreadful. She looks almost happy now, on the bare chance of going home to him. Yet she must know it's just a chance. Why do I try to keep her?" And he knew why, knew that he had never loved anyone else as much, or would again; knew that he loved her enough to try to save her from a futile gesture if he was right, and even to let her go if he was wrong, and that faith of hers was justified.

He said: "Don't tell me if you don't want. How does it happen you believe in him so completely?"

"Because once I told him I didn't trust him, and have always regretted it."

Well, he had his answer.

"Go to bed now, Denise. The papers won't be in from Southampton until late in the afternoon, probably. I suppose you won't run away in the night?"

She stood up, hesitated at the door. "I shan't run away, I promise. There's something I should tell you, Gilbert. That time, just before our marriage, when I saw Keith, was only once for an hour or so. It didn't seem dishonorable."

The wildest jealousy was sweeping him. By a violent physical effort he forced it back, made himself say: "It's all right."

"Good night, Gilbert, and thank you."

As he said good night and went to his room, he wondered if she would thank him when the American papers came. Then he did something he had not done in all the months of the marriage. He went to her bedroom. The door was unlocked. She had not bothered to lock doors since it was settled without many words between them that their marriage was to be only formal. He thought bitterly that at least she did trust him not to force himself upon her.

She was asleep, with the morning light streaming across her. She must have fallen into an exhausted sleep immediately on going to bed. One hand, with her wedding ring on her finger, was flung out across the pillow. What a child she looked, lying there!

Longing, loneliness swept through him, watching her. Was it all no use, would she leave him finally, and go back to Keith Sheldie in the end, no matter what he did? Or would she some day, if he were patient still, love him? He could not tell.

He knew only that he had hurt her, and he had never meant to hurt her.

He took an extra coverlet from her bed, drew the shades so the brightening light should not wake her, and laid down himself on the couch under her windows. As if as if by being in the same room he could be closer to her, close enough to save her from any hurt again.

He had meant to leave before she woke but they woke in the same moment. She regarded him sleepily, and he said before she could speak: "I was afraid you might wake and feel ill. You were so nervous before you went to bed. You don't mind, do you?"

He could not tell her that he had been so lonely for her. He would appeal to her pride, if he must, to keep her, even to reminding her of her father's debt, though time was, when he would not have thought of doing that. But he would never ask for her pity!

"I don't mind. What do you want to do today, Gilbert, before the papers come in?"

As if now that she was so soon to be done with him, there was nothing she would not do for him!

He thought that, but he only said: "Let's have breakfast sent up, and then go walking. They say the bluebells in Kew Gardens are wonderful, and I've never seen them."

From very long ago the voice of his tutor came to him, telling him of English bluebells in Kew Gardens in the spring. He'd never told Denise about his tutor, or much about his childhood or himself. She wouldn't have been interested.

He came back from his own room dressed to tell her that he had telephoned, that the American newspapers would not be up from Southampton until late afternoon, and watched her try to pretend not to be disappointed.

She tried very hard all that bright afternoon to be gay, to be interested in whatever he said. Under the formal trees, along the neat paths where even the riotous spring bloom seemed made decorous to suit English taste, she walked with her arm in his. And a dowager walking stiffly on the arm of her companion said, loud enough for them to hear: "American honey-mooners. Really!" He watched the quick pink color rise in Denise's cheeks, but he held her arm inside his.

Denise said: "Does it make it up to you at all, Gilbert, that I like you, that I wish I'd treated you better?"

"You don't have to 'make up' anything to me, if you're right, and you sail tomorrow."

She turned her pretty head, and regarded for an instant the black substantial back of the dowager moving away from them at a stately pace. "When I'm old like that, I wonder whether I'll remember spring days like this, that are so beautiful! They are exciting, the scents and the colors and the sounds of bird-songs."

He thought: "She's twenty-two. That woman looked past seventy. Fifty years from now, will Denise remember anything about me, more than my name, or that she was married to me for a little while? If she sails tomorrow, she will remember no more than that." For the strangest doubt had risen in him all that day, watching her confident face, that perhaps she was right, and being right, he would lose her forever. But almost—almost, with her arm on his, his smile so serene, her voice friendly, he could wish—that she should have her wish!

They walked back along that path, where the blue-bells were thick under the great trees that had seen Elizabeth ride by perhaps, and the Stuarts, and the whole of modern English history. So they passed the dowager again.

He caught a glimpse of her face, composed, empty, the face of an elderly Englishwoman of a good class. In the 'eighties, in tight-waisted frocks and absurd beflowered hats, she must have walked under those trees, a young girl like Denise. What did she remember from that time? Nothing that showed, that warmed her face, remembering.

He said to Denise: "If you should sail tomorrow, dear, do not quite forget me. Remember perhaps today, the bluebells and the clear sky and the lawns."

"I'll always remember, Gilbert."

In the cab on the way back to Grosvenor House she was too nervous to talk, and he made no more effort with her.

When they were walking into the lobby, he said to her: "Go straight upstairs, Denise. They'll have the newspapers at the desk. I'll bring them to you."

She nodded said, "We did have a nice afternoon, didn't we?" and smiled at him faintly, and went on.

The clerk at the desk had obtained for him a complete assortment of New York papers. He wished, when he saw the first one, that he had ordered no others.

Felicia and Keith had made practically all the front pages. The paper that he picked up first had both their photographs, and Eustace's. Yet in the last twenty-four hours, he had been through so much that he had never once thought of Eustace. The only thought that came to him now was that he was profoundly sorry for Eustace.

He went upstairs, turning a page of a tabloid, to find a picture of Denise and himself staring out. "Sister and brother-in-law of Mrs. Eustace Gardiner Dayne," the caption said. The words had absolutely no meaning.

Denise opened the door of their suite as he was fumbling for a key. He said: "You don't want to look at those things, Denise. And you can do whatever you want about me—only please, you must not go home, because it's no use. Just believe me, and don't read the darn things."

Her eyes were great blue ovals in an ashen-white face. Her words were slow, as if she had to fumble for each one of them. "I believe you, but I have to see."

She took the papers out of his hand, sat down, opened one with her hands that were shaking. He wanted to leave the room so that he need not watch the agony in her face. But he was afraid to leave her!

He stood behind her chair, so that her face was hidden from him, and he could only see a curve of her cheek and her down-bent bright head. He read over her shoulder with a vague thought that if she came to anything too harrowing, he would take the paper away.

That was one of New York's more sensational dailies. Under a wide black headline the story began, chattily:

Handsome Keith Sheldie, Jr., and beautiful Mrs. Eustace Gardiner Dayne lie today near death in Magnolia Farm Hospital, Paintown, Virginia, following a motor accident on the Shore Highway, when the car which Keith Sheldie was driving collided with a truck, only a mile from Twelve Willows Inn, where Mrs. Dayne and Mr. Sheldie had spent three days registered as Mr. and Mrs. Keith Sheldie, Jr.

The innkeeper, Ronald Hunt, on his way to market, made the first identification of their unconscious bodies, as the roadster burned, and with it all Mr. Sheldie's papers.

The face of Mrs. Dayne's true identity became known when the innkeeper reached the house of Keith Sheldie, Sr., by telephone and was informed there was no Mrs. Sheldie, Jr. A broadcast of the initials F. R. D. (Felicia Rendale Dayne), resulted in an immediate telephone response from Mr. Eustace Gardiner Dayne, who was just starting back from a week-end at a friend's house in Maryland.

Mrs. Dayne is suffering from a fractured skull, burns of the arms and face—

Gilbert put his arms over Denise's shoulders. She said: "Oh, Felicia's pretty face! I know that's the least important thing—but it makes it real."

MARION, April 12.—Nine-year-old Juanita adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Davis Underwood, played with her two older sisters and a brother today for the first time. She met the three, Agnes, Lenore and Robert Brownlee of Hillsboro, only yesterday. Juanita was adopted by the Underwoods from a home a few months after she was placed there at the age of 11 days following her mother's death. Her relationship with her brothers and sisters was established through correspondence.

He stood behind her chair, so that her face was hidden from him, and he could only see a curve of her cheek and her down-bent bright head. He read over her shoulder with a vague thought that if she came to anything too harrowing, he would take the paper away.

That was one of New York's more sensational dailies. Under a wide black headline the story began, chattily:

Handsome Keith Sheldie, Jr., and beautiful Mrs. Eustace Gardiner Dayne lie today near death in Magnolia Farm Hospital, Paintown, Virginia, following a motor accident on the Shore Highway, when the car which Keith Sheldie was driving collided with a truck, only a mile from Twelve Willows Inn, where Mrs. Dayne and Mr. Sheldie had spent three days registered as Mr. and Mrs. Keith Sheldie, Jr.

The innkeeper, Ronald Hunt, on his way to market, made the first identification of their unconscious bodies, as the roadster burned, and with it all Mr. Sheldie's papers.

The face of Mrs. Dayne's true identity became known when the innkeeper reached the house of Keith Sheldie, Sr., by telephone and was informed there was no Mrs. Sheldie, Jr. A broadcast of the initials F. R. D. (Felicia Rendale Dayne), resulted in an immediate telephone response from Mr. Eustace Gardiner Dayne, who was just starting back from a week-end at a friend's house in Maryland.

Mrs. Dayne is suffering from a fractured skull, burns of the arms and face—

Gilbert put his arms over Denise's shoulders. She said: "Oh, Felicia's pretty face! I know that's the least important thing—but it makes it real."

A comedy of love in the South seas, "Waikiki Wedding", brings Bing Crosby, Martha Raye and Bob Burns, funsters of "Rhythm on the Range" together again. The picture shows at the State tonight and Tuesday.

Shirley Ross, singer, who played with the Raye and Bazooka Burns in "The Big Broadcast of 1937" plays the feminine romantic lead in Bing's latest picture.

Miss Ross meets Crosby, a press agent for a pineapple cannery in Hawaii, when she goes to the island on a trip which she has won in a pineapple recipe contest. She doesn't like Waikiki and is about to walk out on Bing, who conceived the whole idea of the contest for publicity. He proceeds to make Waikiki romantic and glamorous for Miss Ross and ends up by having to produce a Waikiki which doesn't exist. Being a resourceful press agent, Bing produces it and falls in love with Miss Ross.

The celebrated team of song writers, Leo Robin and Ralph Rainger, who have created scores of musical hits are behind the lyrics in this picture, "Blue Hawaii".

"Sweet Is the Word for You" and "In a Little While Heaven", which are sung by Bing and Miss Ross. The musical score also includes "Okolehau", sung by Martha Raye in the film, and "Sweet Lullaby", by Harry Owens.

Mae Clarke and Jack Holt are seen in latest newspaper reporters in "Trouble in Morocco" which plays on a double bill with "Midnight Taxi" at the Grand tonight and Tuesday.

Holt finds out that Miss Clarke is in Morocco to find out about a gun-running story. To keep her from getting from place to place in the district he takes her papers and passport and starts out for himself. When he visits officers of the Foreign Legion to get the truth in the story, he is told it is only a yarn. Convinced he leaves, sending Miss Clarke's papers back to her. He runs into a legionnaire whom he recognizes as a former gangster.

The soldier wants to desert and after, dopping him takes the reporter's clothes and papers. When Holt wakes up he is in the legion because officials refuse to believe his story. Miss Clarke won't identify him and he is sent with the other soldiers to barracks. He finds out the truth in the gun-running story when he is forced to drive a truckload of arms through the desert to the Arabs. Miss Clarke finds out his mission and set out after him, compelling him to save them both when they run into skirmishing natives and legionnaires.

taking our men."

As miners swarmed here from a district yesterday, Glenn Hickman, secretary of the Picher union, handed them pick handles from Tri-State headquarters.

About noon, 30 men carrying blue caps raided the unoccupied International headquarters here.

Sporadic street fights followed.

More than a dozen men were treated for minor injuries. There was no C. I. O. meeting.

From Tri-State headquarters word spread that the C. I. O. would meet at nearby Treece, Kas. Three truckloads of pick handle-armed men went to Treece and splintered furniture in International headquarters.

The trek to Galena started.

Calm Is Disrupted

Outwardly Galena was enjoying a calm Sunday as the Picher delegation, estimated at 500 to 600, arrived at blue card headquarters.

"They asked me if they could parade," said Hickman. "I told them yes—but be peaceful."

At a signal, the blue card men started a boisterous, laughing, pick handle brandishing march toward International headquarters, three blocks away.

As they reached International hall, a man broke ranks, smashed a union building window.

Immediately there was a burst of gunfire from inside.

Three marchers dropped, wounded. Others, confused, fled in all directions. A few picked up their fallen comrades.

Smoke bombs, apparently hurled by marchers, smashed against the union hall. None went inside and the smoke only added to confusion in the street.

Two or three bullets struck the front of a theater across the street and mainline fans fled through a rear door.

No one thought of the men in the hall for several minutes. Investigation then disclosed they had fled down an outside stairway into an alley. Their number was generally estimated at from 12 to 15.

SOLONS TACKLE RELIEF PLANS

Determined to Enact Two-Year Legislation By Thursday

recently passed by the house which would have provided $17,000,000 for the rest of 1937 with state and local governments furnishing $8,500,000 each. Should the bill in its revised form pass the senate, house concurrence in the changes will be necessary for enactment.

Gov. Martin L. Davey has asserted, however, that new tax sources must be found to provide the state's share of relief money and so far has declined to recommend similar levies for local governments to raise their share.

Up to Legislature

The governor has taken the stand that the legislature's sole duty is to find tax sources after it has been advised how much will be needed but he has suggested excise levies for counties and municipalities to impose and measures intended to authorize them have been introduced.

They were defeated in the house, however, and a proposal to permit municipalities to act also was turned down. Revival of the latter in the senate was seen as a possibility in some quarters.

Asserting the state is unable to provide its share of funds, Governor Davey proposed to feed relief clients by setting up national guard kitchens. The plan has met with strenuous opposition from various quarters.

daughter and two sons, the younger of whom is carrying on his father's business.

The elder Alcorne, however, has not retired. He'd like to, he said, so that he could go back to the farm, but, he adds, "I'm too busy here."

The veteran upholsterer keeps in touch with happenings of the day, especially politics, and occasionally takes part in local events. He ran for mayor of East Palestine three times.

His politics? Well, he recalls, "I began as a Prohibitionist. Opposed to the gold standard, I became a member later on of the Populist party which believed in coinage and then Bryan came along and stole my platform in 1896 and I had to go over with him. I've been a Democrat ever since."

He has quite a little work to do on the coffin lay. The silver grey living he has tucked inside and when he gets time he'll attach it properly, he says.

And he's confident that he'll have time, although he's nearing the four-score mark.

He believes his age, however. There is nothing fragile about him. He's extremely active, walks about briskly and talks the same way.

Death, apparently, might be the last thing he would think about.

Winter Hard On Automobile; Efficient Operation Calls For Spring Tune-Up

STRESS BRAKES AND STEERING

Check-Up Will Make Summer Driving More Pleasurable

Winter is always hard on a car. Often it must be left standing for hours in the cold. Frost, snow and dirt are part of its winter diet. In order to put the car into shape for the most pleasurable spring and summer driving, several things should be done.

The radiator should be drained and flushed in order to insure a clear flow of water through the cooling system. Motor oil should be changed and new lubricants applied all around. The carburetor and fuel system ought to be checked carefully for warmer weather.

Test Brakes
Brakes should be tested, and particular care should be given to the steering apparatus. In most cases, simple adjustments will be all that is required to put them in perfect running order. The importance of brakes and steering gear, however, makes it necessary that they be checked before being subjected to any hard driving.

In routine city driving, minor adjustments may go unnoticed or may be neglected. Often these adjustments remain unnoticed until the car is called upon to work at full power over long periods. Then they may develop into conditions that necessitate repair expense that could have been avoided.

Good tires are among the most important equipment of an automobile, for considerations of both safety and comfort in driving. All tools and emergency equipment should be checked carefully. All lights should be tested, and headlamp beams properly adjusted.

New windshield wiper blades should be replaced if worn after a hard winter's use. The body of the car should be thoroughly cleaned and polished to revive the beauty of its luster.

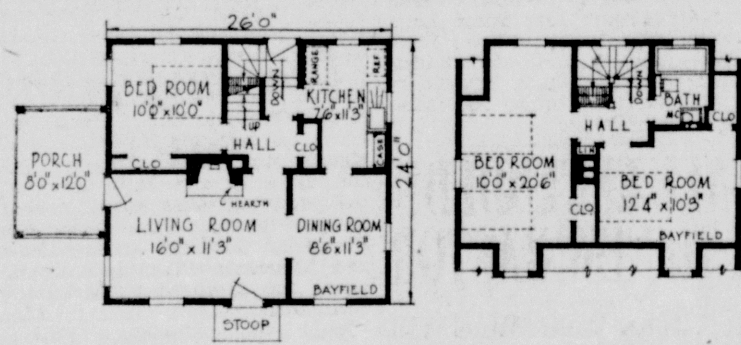

Battery Needs Checking
A motor tune-up is one of the best precautionary measures that the motorist can take in the spring. The battery should be checked carefully, and the generator charging rate adjusted for long-distance running at good speeds. Shock absorbers may also need adjusting, and a thorough greasing of the chassis will add much to the pleasure of driving.

The fan belt, which is not called upon to carry much of a load during routine city driving, should be checked and adjusted to function properly on longer and faster runs. Body bolts, door hinges and latches must be oiled and tightened to eliminate the squeaks and rattles that sometimes develop during the rough winter season.

There are a few suggestions to drivers who will soon feel the call of the open road. If they are followed, the motorist will find his spring driving much pleasanter.

Take your car to Kornbau's, tell them what you want, and you may be sure of a job well done.

A Model Home You Can Afford

Above is pictured the Bayfield, a very likeable arrangement, complete and compact floor plan, creates a pleasing example of this Cape Cod design. The charm of the living room is emphasized by a natural fireplace. The kitchen, efficient and comfortable, is fully equipped. On the first floor, also, is located a convenient bedroom, and an attractiveness characterizes the open porch.

The second floor includes two large bedrooms, a well appointed bath, with medicine cabinets, and last, but not least, large closets.

This home, like the scores of others for which plans are available at the People's Lumber company here, may be constructed through provisions of the FHA.

STAIN SHORTENS GARMENT'S LIFE

Paris Manager Tells How Chemicals React On Cloth

"Your face will last a lifetime. But the life of a garment is short indeed when it's stained with corrosive agents."

"The toothpaste you use, the deodorant, the depilatory, the bleach for face or hair, the cuticle remover—any may contain chemicals, proper in their place, which, however, may destroy the toughest and the most expensive fabric."

L. C. Price, manager of the Paris Cleaners, speaks from the experience of years in which he and his staff have combated hundreds of stains and spots of varying natures.

"A few drops splashed on your dress, and here's what happens. The water content evaporates and thus the chemical is concentrated. It doesn't show, however, and you take to the cleaner a garment which is apparently unstained."

"The heat of the presses increases the action of the chemical 200 per cent. Presto! A hole appears in the armpits or elsewhere in the dress."

Mr. Price points out that any chemist may be consulted as to the chemical accuracy of this statement.

"Therefore," he says, "we urge you, for the sake of your garments to take care to protect them when applying any cosmetics or proprietary products. And in using deodorants be sure to follow directions closely. If you know that a garment is stained with one of these corrosive agents, tell us at the time we receive the garment so that we'll know how to handle it."

MOTOR DEMANDS CHANGE OF OIL

It's Time to Flush Crankcase and Refill for Spring

Every motor vehicle that has been in operation during the winter months should have its engine oil drained, the crankcase should be flushed, and refilled with new oil of the proper grade for the spring season. This suggestion by Smith's garage, East Third st., is well worth following.

Engine oil in cars that have been running during the cold months is certain to be diluted and contaminated to the extent that its lubricating value is badly impaired, and in a good many engines this contamination has reached the point where damage to bearings, cylinders and pistons is likely to result if the oil is not changed.

During winter months considerable water gets into engine oil and contaminates it. Over a gallon of water is produced in an auto engine with the burning of a gallon of gasoline, and during warm weather most of this water is dissipated through the exhaust in the form of vapor or steam. Moisture in the crankcase is condensed to water much more rapidly in cold weather.

Motor oil is further diluted by the action of automatic chokes. With cold engines, automatic chokes may remain in operation throughout the period of a short run and permit too rich a mixture, or even raw gasoline, to get into the cylinders and thereby cause dilution of the motor oil.

Leakage of anti-freeze solutions, collection of dust and abrasives, and the chemical change that constantly is taking place in motor oil in an engine, in addition to water contamination, makes it very necessary that every car owner have his winter oil drained without delay.

Take a moment this week to take your car to Smith's.

Bob Feller Takes Calmly His Initial Set-Back Of Season

Little Rock Rookie Clouts Iowa Schoolboy's Fast Ball For Homer to Beat Indians

Jim Tabor's Circuit Blow Gives Minor Leaguers 5-0 Win Over Tribe; Runs Are First Feller Has Allowed In 18 Spring Training Innings

DECATUR, Ala., April 11—Eighteen-year-old Bob Feller, Cleveland's brilliant fireball pitcher, accepted today with characteristic calm his initial spring setback—caused by a home run with the bases loaded.

Jim Tabor, Little Rock, Ark., rookie from the University of Alabama, connected in the third inning yesterday with Feller's speed ball and sent it soaring over the head of Centerfielder Earl Averill.

Tabor scored standing up to give Little Rock's Travelers a 5 to 0 victory over the Indians. A day before, they trimmed the New York Yankees.

Feller, American league strikeout sensation retained a stoical expression as Tabor, lanky third baseman, blasted the circuit blow. Bob resumed his chore as unruffled as a major league veteran.

The four runs were the first the Iowa school boy allowed in 18 innings of spring pitching. He held the New York Giants hitless in 11 of the innings. The Travelers' three hits brought his opponents' total to four.

Feller has retired 29 rivals via the strikeout route.

Manager Steve O'Neill indicated here, where the Tribe takes up its exhibition series with the Giants, that Feller, Mel Harder, Johnny Allen and Denny Galehouse would be his "big four" for the 1937 season's start. The skipper said either Harder or Allen would hurl the curtain-raiser at Detroit.

Although Feller's arm is ready to carry him nine innings, O'Neill said "spot" before possibly 40,000 opening day fans and, secondly, he could be depended upon to draw a big crowd for the second Detroit game.

YANKEES STILL TOPS IN LOOP

New York Club Leads In Spring Training Play For Major Leagues

NEW YORK, April 12.—Despite weekend reverses, the New York Yankees are rolling home on the crest of a victory wave which has kept them on top of the Grapefruit league standings with 20 victories in 25 starts for an .80 average.

The Yanks bombarded southern fences for 56 runs last week, but saw their string of consecutive triumphs snapped at 13 when they lost to Little Rock Saturday and to Memphis yesterday.

Surprise of the week was the rise of Connie Mack's "buy as you go" Philadelphia Athletics to second place. The A's won five games and pushed ahead of the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Washington Senators, the two clubs tied for third place.

Close behind the Senators and the Pirates are the Cleveland Indians with the Brooklyn Dodgers, Chicago Cubs and New York Giants also playing .600 ball or better.

The Boston Red Sox and the St. Louis Cardinals are the only two recognized contenders in the lower reaches of the league.

RANGERS NEAR WIN IN SERIES

N. York Team Needs One Victory To Capture Hockey Trophy

DETROIT, April 12.—The New York Rangers, who finished third in the American division of the National Hockey league, stood one game away from the Stanley cup today.

Resuming their sensational conquering drive last night the blue-shirted New Yorkers defeated the Detroit Red Wings, cup defenders and league champions, 1 to 0.

Victory Tuesday night when the Stanley cup series continues will give the Rangers the trophy. A Red Wings victory would push the series to five games. It now stands two to one with the Rangers on top.

The Syracuse Stars of the western division of the International American league took a pair of decisive victories over the Philadelphia Ramblers, eastern division champs, over the past weekend to win the title series, three games to one. After breaking the deadlock with a 4-1 victory at Philadelphia Saturday, they turned the affair into a rout on their home ice last night, winning 5-0.

Akron Shooter Wins Rifle Championship

CLEVELAND, April 12.—Milton Klotz, of the Zeppelin Rifle club of Akron, held today the individual championship of the fourth annual invitational small-bore rifle tournament after scoring 960 out of a possible 1,000 points.

Klotz won two of three events yesterday.

He captured the Oliver Hazard Perry memorial trophy match with 392 out of a possible 400. He was victorious in the standing event with 191 out of 200.

MANY BASEBALL STARS ON SPOT DURING SEASON

Father Time and Critical Fans Watch Play Of Old Timers

CHICAGO, April 12.—Old Father Time and critical John Q. Public will put many stars "on the spot" this coming major league baseball season.

Seldom have so many luminaries been at the crossroads of careers which for years thrilled thousands of fans. Al Simmons, who in 12 seasons hit .347 and was sold to Detroit for $75,000, must make good this campaign with Washington's Senators, who bought him for little more than the $7,500 waiver price. It looks like the crucial test for a star whose "foot in the bucket" stance is the most widely known in the sport.

Rogers Hornsby has clinched a place as one of baseball's all-time greats, but this season the "Rajah" is leaving it to St. Louis Browns' coaches to decide if his playing days are over. And Manager Jimmy Dykes of Chicago's White Sox, who intends to play a lot of third base again, may find the pace too swift for his aging legs.

Mickey Cochrane, Detroit's peppy manager whose loss through illness hurt his club last year, says he will catch 100 games, if he does, the Bengal hopes will ride high. If he doesn't it may spell "through" for his many years of playing stardom. Another Tiger, Goose Goslin, will start his 17th season. A ship may hand his outfield job to youthful Chet Laabs.

Gabby Hartnett, great Chicago Cubs' backstop, is still listed as the Bruin No. 1 catcher but Ken O'Dea is ready to step in at any moment. Down at St. Louis, Lon Warneke, with the Cardinals, will be trying to prove he still is one of the game's best.

Lefty Gomez, showing signs of a comeback, may hit his once great stride on the mound for New York's Yankees, and J. Francis (Shanty) Hogan has a great chance to make Father Time's face red as Washington's backstop. And then there's Tony Lazzeri. The Yanks have spent $117,000 since 1927 on the mistaken idea Tony's playing days were over—and "Poosh 'Em Up" goes right on doing just that.

BUCKEYE DIVER COPS AAU TITLE

Al Patnik of Ohio State Wins Diving Championship In New Haven

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 12.—Out of Pittsburgh, by way of Ohio State university, has come the newest sensation in national swimming and diving ranks.

He is Al Patnik, clean-cut, well-built Buckeye freshman and new national A. A. U. diving champion off both the one-meter and 10-foot boards. He doesn't look his 21 years.

Spectators won't soon forget Patnik's grace on the board, his erect posture as he poises for the plunge, the way he seems to hang momentarily in the air before hitting the water and his slick-as-butter entry into the pool.

PORT WAYNE, Ind.—When Maj. C. G. Green of the U. S. Army Corps, Wright Field, Dayton, O., came to a dinner meeting here he met James Olds. Nineteen years before the two men were released together from a German prison camp when the Armistice was signed. Olds was a pilot, Green his machine-gunner, when they were shot down behind the German lines in August of 1918.

BOWLING NEWS

Cuyahoga Falls Masons took the measure of a Salem bowling team at the Masonic temple alleys Saturday night, winning the special match 2,629 to 2,508 on games of 924, 881 and 824.

Ralph Hawley of the Salem quintet was high for both teams with a 558 three-game score. Pete Shaw of the Falls five was second high with 554.

The Cuyahoga Falls team was entertained with a dinner at the German hall prior to the match.

Dal DeRhodes of the Miller five counted 622 on games of 238, 201 and 183 to turn in the high score.

In doubles competition, the team of Miller-Gregg defeated Detwiler-Jackson, 1,117 to 968, and Pugh-Hawley won over Hine-Ballantine, 1,055 to 1,011.

Breezy Briefs Of Sport From Brietz To You

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, April 12.—Bill Terry is casting longing eyes toward Sacramento, Calif., where Dolph Camilli, hard-hitting first sacker of the Phillies, is holding out. . . . When Luke Appling, White Sox shortstop, got hungry during practice at Tucson, Ariz., the other day, he traded a guy an old ball for a cheese sandwich. . . . Joe Louis is advising Henry Armstrong (and colleagues) to steer clear of Pedro Montañez. . . . Nine major league ball clubs can stand strengthening at third base. . . .

Some of Dana X. Bible's Nebraska friends didn't like last week's line about Dana lassoing that triple threat high school back from Houston for his new University of Texas team. . . . "The lasso business isn't a part of Dana's line," writes Cy Sherman in the Lincoln (Neb.) Star. . . . "He is from Tennessee where they shoot their squirrels with rifles." . . . Coming from a neighboring state, your agent should have known a lot better. . . . Attention, pitchers: Bob Feller will tell you how he does it on the radio Saturday night. . . . Dick Bartell is the outstanding Giant of the spring campaign.

When Augie Galan of the Cubs was sent in to run for Gabby Hartnett the other day, he forgot to put on his spikes. . . . He wound up on third base in a pair of carpet slippers. . . . Bill Terry says Bob Feller should win 30 games for Cleveland this year, but other Giants, not quite so enthusiastic, say 12 wins would be more like it. . . . Eddie Mader and John Henry Lewis are all but signed for a St. Louis match this summer.

Southern correspondents report Wayne Ambler, Duke's classy second sacker, is ticketed for the Athletics when his collegiate days are over. . . . Ace Parker, the football star. . . . was taken to camp as insurance if Wally Moses didn't sign, but looks so good he is sure to be kept. . . . Eddie Wilson of the Dodgers, who caught Joe DiMaggio last season with an average of .347, is in the Brooklyn doghouse for failure to slide in practice games. . . . May wind up in the minors as a penalty.

Campbell of Reds Sent To Charlotte

WINSTON SALEM, N. C., April 12.—Gilly Campbell, with the Cincinnati Reds two years and lately third-string catcher, turned toward Charlotte, N. C., today incident to his transfer on option to the Syracuse, N. Y., club of the International league. . . . Announcing the deal, General Manager Warren C. Giles of the Reds said Campbell would be subject to recall within 24 hours, and that he was being returned to the minors only "because he wanted to hold him unless we could get a player for him." . . . Giles turned down two chances to sell Campbell among major-league clubs, he said.

Tris Speaker's Life May Be Saved By Strong Body

Rugged Physique of Former Cleveland Manager May Withstand His Critical Injuries

CLEVELAND, April 12.—Upon the rugged physique familiar for years to baseball fans depended today chances for the recovery of Tris Speaker, 48, former manager of the Cleveland Indians and star centerfielder, whose skull was fractured in a fall from the second story porch of his home. . . . "His condition is critical," said Dr. E. B. Castle at Lakeside hospital, "but I think he'll make it. He has taken care of himself and is strong."

Speaker's left arm was broken and his face severely lacerated also when a porch railing gave way yesterday while he was putting up a flower box for his wife.

The one-time idol of youthful diamond fans plunged head-first 16 feet to a stone wall, edged with jagged cobblestones. Speaker gained his feet and walked to a lawn chair without assistance. He was carried to an ambulance against his protests.

Dr. Castle said the fall would have knocked the average person unconscious.

Speaker managed the Indians in 1920, when they won the world's championship. He resigned as manager in 1926. The following season he played with Washington. He was with the Philadelphia Athletics in 1928, and managed Newark of the International league in 1929 and 1930.

After 1930, Speaker became part owner of the Kansas City club in the American association. He entered the liquor business in 1934 and heads the wholesale wine and liquor firm bearing his name, Tris Speaker, Inc.

FREMONT, April 12.—Fremont Ross High school introduced a new note in scholastic swimming today—spring training. . . . George Gruse, assistant swim coach, said he believed Fremont was the first in the state to adopt that practice for splashes.

Bowling Congress Tourney Has Biggest Day as Dozen Keglers Break Into Money

Changes Made In High Ten Leaders With Bill Ahnert of Elgin, Ill., Leading Strike Jamboree With 728 In the Singles Event

NEW YORK, April 12.—Those so-called "booster" teams evidently did a pretty swell job of breaking in the American Bowling Congress tournament alleys.

Judging from the scores rolled in the pin classic yesterday, the new tournament drives have lost most of their shellac and are now more akin to the alleys in the home towns of the bowlers.

In the most hectic day of congress history yesterday, no less than a dozen mid-west keglers created changes among the high ten leaders.

Leading the strike jamboree was Bill Ahnert, Elgin, Ill., who pounded out a bang-up 728 singles series, missing the lead, held by Ernie Soest, Santa Monica, Cal., by a single pin.

Shortly after Ahnert had registered his total, Mike Anderson, Chicago, cut loose with a brilliant 719 total. One bad shot kept the Windy City ace out of the top spot.

Otto Jasper, Cincinnati, took possession of the all-events department when he hung up a total of 1,980 in averaging 220 to oust Alex Carey, Belleville, Mich.

Johnny Murphy, last year's all-events champion, was one of the few on the Sabbath card who did not get hot. The Indianapolis youngster fell 172 pins short of his 2,000 winning total of last year when he pulled up with 1,834.

Fifty-six more teams will attempt to batter down the 3,118 total of the Krakow Furnitures, Detroit, in the five-man competition tonight.

WINSTON SALEM, N. C.—The Boston Red Sox, minus Manager Joe Cronin and stung by an 8 to 3 defeat at the hands of the Atlanta club yesterday, took on the Cincinnati Reds today in a none too joyous frame of mind.

LENINGRAD—The Institute of Oriental Studies of the Academy of Sciences has received from its Astrakhan correspondent a manuscript representing a dictionary of the Khorezmian language containing 2,000 Khorezmian words with their equivalent in the Arabian and Persian languages.

ASTORIA, Ore.—Movie directors seeking rough and rugged loggers in nearby lumber regions for a logging camp film are having difficulty. They declare the modern logger—often a university student or graduate—is too civilized for dramatic purposes.
